Road work

Works begins to reopen Rt 16

Gallatin County Judge/executive Ken McFarland had good news for the fiscal court when it met last Thursday evening. McFarland said work had begun to repair a major dirt slide on Rt 16 that had closed the road near Glencoe for over a year.

At the court's February meeting, state highway officials who attended for another reason were harshly criticized for allowing the road to be closed for so long.

"This is an outrage and someone is going to get killed because of you," Glencoe city councilman JuJu Sullivan told the officials. "School bus drivers using the Cemetery Hill detour can't see oncoming traffic when they make the turn onto U. S. 127. Our children's lives are at stake."

After hearing work had begun on the on the $3.5 million project and that the road would be reopened by July, Glencoe magistrate Dudley Gullion said he was "tickled to death."

In other fiscal court business:

•County Attorney Spike Wright said a new monitoring system was being used that allowed prisoners to be sentenced to house arrest instead of jail. If successful, the county will save thousands of dollars a year. Wright emphasized the county was not being soft on crime and that all violent offenders would still be kept in jail.

•Roy Neeley was given the contract to replace the roof and renovate the EMS building. His winning bid was $25,000.

•McFarland said AOC (Administrative Office of the Courts) would pay to turn property behind Beringer Drug Center and around the sheriff's office into a parking lot. The project will cost between $75,000 and $90,000.

•The court approved the Eagle Scout proposal of Sam Foster to build a marquee and install a flagpole at the county park in on March 29. Jennings, 67, who had lent money to Stephenson, was badly beaten and died of multiple head fractures. Police said they have a suspect in the case but have not said who that suspect is.

Police searched Stephenson's apartment shortly after Jennings' body was found and two days later he attempted to kill himself by slashing his wrists. His life was saved Monday night, April 9, when officers returned to the apartment to interview him and found him with the self-inflicted wounds. They also found 13 Oxycontin pills. Stephenson was arrested on the tampering with evidence and drug charges upon his release from the hospital and taken to jail.

Relatives of Stephenson say he lived a flamboyant lifestyle well above his means and considered himself a "ladies' man." The also say he had a temper.

In recent days, it has become clear he also has serious financial trouble and has borrowed money from people who are close to him. Monday, his court appointed public defender, Steve Florian, said his client was broke and had an income of only $600 a month from a pension.

Stephenson had borrowed money from Jennings. He had also borrowed money from his aunt, Fay Sparks. In December, a Boone County judge ordered Stephenson to repay the $3,750 he borrowed from Sparks but had refused to repay. Sparks had to withdraw money from her retirement account for the loan and was accessed a $750 tax penalty, according to a suit she filed when the loan wasn't repaid.

Stephenson was ordered to make $500 monthly payments to his aunt until the loan was paid off. The first check bounced, as did other checks he wrote to Sparks. On March 30, a day after Jennings was killed, Stephenson gave Sparks' attorney a money order for $1,000 to cover some of his missed payments.

In February of this year, Stephenson sold the Beaver Road real estate that was left to him by his mother, who died in a house fire in 1994. He received $283,118 for the property and the next month he paid off a $263,5000 mortgage he had on the house and 16 acres.

Stephenson's only criminal charge came in 1992 when he was arrested for shoplifting from a grocery store. He was given diversion.

Last November, he and his wife, Arlene, divorced after nearly 40 years of marriage. They have two children, Farley and Sar-

Sometimes life doesn't make sense

This and That

By Kelley Warnick
Editor

I hope the people who read this column usually find it somewhat humorous but I'm not feeling funny this week. That's because sometimes life just doesn't make sense.

Last week, I learned a delightful woman I've known for ten years was brutally murdered. Leigh Jennings was 67-years-old when someone repeatedly slammed her head into the floor of her Indiana home until she died. She looked much younger than her age and had flowing strawberry-blond hair, a radiant smile and natural good looks.

I got to know Leigh because she worked at Jim Young's Barbershop in Florence where I've been getting my hair cut for 30 years. Former Gallatin County resident John Young usually cuts my hair but when he's not available, I always asked for Leigh. That's because she was good at what she did and she had an engaging personality.

Leigh loved animals, country scenes and flowers. Pictures of all those things decorated the cubicle that was her office. Her house was next door to her mother's and she thought it was a privilege to care for the woman she loved so much. She lived a healthy lifestyle and believed in a holistic type of health care that treats diseases and maladies without the use of conventional doctors and prescription drugs.

Although I only saw Leigh at the barbershop, I came to know her as a fun loving, big-hearted, woman who was glad to help anyone who needed her. I once asked her why she became a barber.

"I just like working with men more than I do women," Leigh said. "I learned long ago life is too short not to be doing what you like to do."

Leigh's murder shocked and saddened me as did the murders last May of my wife's uncle and aunt, Bill and Peggy Stephenson. Like Leigh, they were brutally murdered in their Boone County home. Bill and Peggy were both 74 years old when they died and had been married 54 years. Police have said little about the murders but the crime scene has been described as horrific.

The Stephensons also were wonderful, generous and kind people who were loved by everyone who knew them. Bill had a quick sense of humor and would regularly take food, clothing and toys to less fortunate people in Eastern Kentucky.

They were a deeply religious couple who led prayer groups and were active in their church. They touched the lives of many and their funeral was one of the largest Northern Kentucky has ever seen with about 1,500 people paying their last respects.

No one has been arrested for any of the three murders but it now appears police believe all three were killed by the same man, in the same fashion. If suspicions are correct, that killer is someone Billy and Peggy knew very well, their nephew, Stevie Stephenson.

Like I said at the beginning, sometimes life just doesn't make sense.

Americans deal with pain at the pumps

Summer's around the corner and high gas prices have many of us trimming our spending.

The cost to "fill 'er up" affects prices of everything that must be shipped such as food and other consumer items. It's an economic wildcard as our nation struggles to recover from economic hard times.

The high emotions over gas prices have presidential candidates jockeying to use the issue to their advantage. No one knows how it will affect the November election.

While there's nothing drivers can do to reduce the cost of a gallon of gas, there are ways to make gas go farther.

Improving fuel economy is nothing new to many motorists, but some might still be surprised at the many ways they can get more bang for their buck with regards to fuel costs.

Here are some strategies for stretching our fuel dollars:

- Don't break the law. Obeying the speed limit might save your life, and it can also save you money. Typically, fuel economy decreases rapidly as a car reaches and surpasses 60 miles per hour. According to the U.S. Department of Safety, drivers can assume that each five miles per hour they drive over 60, they are paying an additional $0.26 per gallon for gas.

- Empty the trunk. Though it might be more convenient to keep your golf clubs in the trunk of your car, extra and unnecessary cargo in a vehicle's trunk drastically reduces fuel economy. An extra 100 pounds in a vehicle can reduce miles per gallon by as much as 2 percent, so keep a trunk free of items that aren't absolutely necessary.

- Stop idling. Many people let their car idle for several minutes on cold mornings. But today's newer vehicles don't really need to idle to warm up, and idling can be very taxing on fuel economy. Depending on the size of the car, idling can use between a quarter to a half gallon of fuel per hour. If you still insist on letting the vehicle idle, a few seconds of idling should be enough to warm the engine up.

- Embrace cruise control on long drives without lots of stopping and starting. Maintaining a constant speed, which a vehicle does when drivers utilize cruise control, can help save fuel, as it's less taxing on an engine to continue at one speed then it is to constantly switch back and forth between high and low speeds.

- Inflate the tires. Poorly inflated tires lower gas mileage and also pose a safety hazard. The DOE notes that properly inflated tires can improve gas mileage by as much as 3 percent. Ideal tire pressure is different for each vehicle, so check your vehicle's owner's manual for recommended tire pressure. Some vehicle manufacturers also include the recommended tire pressure on the vehicle itself, be it in the driver's side door jamb or in the vehicle's glove compartment. Tire pressure printed on the tire's sidewall might not be the ideal tire inflation for your particular vehicle, so always adhere to the manufacturer's recommendation instead.

- Drive the car you need, not the car you want. Drivers who truly need to save money at the pump should consider the type of vehicle they're driving, and whether it's the car they need or the car they want. For instance, office workers who own a pickup truck but don't use it to haul items might want to consider a smaller vehicle that gets better gas mileage.

Improving fuel efficiency is a great way for motorists to save money and reduce the expenses associated with vehicle ownership.

- Buy Exxon stock. If you can't beat 'em, join 'em!

Kentucky Commentary

Legislative session was a frustrating failure

By Al Cross

The atmosphere was happy among legislators, lobbyists, legislative staff and journalists on Thursday as they looked forward to the end of an often frustrating session of the General Assembly.

Redistricting was on hiatus. the budget had long been passed and on schedule. The road plan and the bill to fight prescription drug abuse had been worked out and were awaiting final votes. And House Democrats had produced a long list of talking points to argue that the session was successful after all.

But in the paneled offices of legislative leaders and the governor's office, the atmosphere was sour and getting worse. And when the clock ran out at midnight, the session that could have been somewhat salvaged was mostly a frustrating failure after all.

This column was written at mid-afternoon Friday, when the blame game was still escalating and the facts were still being sorted out, but we knew the main protagonists in the game of legislative chicken that had no winners: Senate President David Williams and Gov. Steve Beshear, with House Speaker Greg Stumbo in the major supporting role.

Williams was holding the transportation budget hostage for Beshear's signature on the road plan. Beshear offered to sign the plan if the Senate would pass one of his few priority bills, to eventually raise the school dropout age to 18.

House Democrats had decided that afternoon not to override any of Beshear's 45 line-item vetoes of the budget bill — contrary to what Williams said Stumbo had told him during their final negotiations on the budget. Williams's office couldn't cite a specific Stumbo quote on overrides and it's hard to believe Stumbo would have made such a categorical pledge.

The dust-up with Stumbo also appeared to kill the most important bill still hanging fire - Stumbo's measure to crack down on prescription drug abuse, a top priority for him and other legislators from Central Appalachia, the epicenter of what has become a national epidemic.

The doctor's strong lobby had won concessions that made some lawmakers unhappy, and others thought the compromise bill was still too strong, but it looked ready to pass the Senate on a close vote. But Williams never brought it to the floor.

The same was true of the bill to fund college scholarships in the two coal-fields, an outgrowth of the effort by Stumbo to bring into the state system the University of Pikeville, a school headed by former Gov. Paul Patton, who was the first Democratic governor to do battle with Williams.

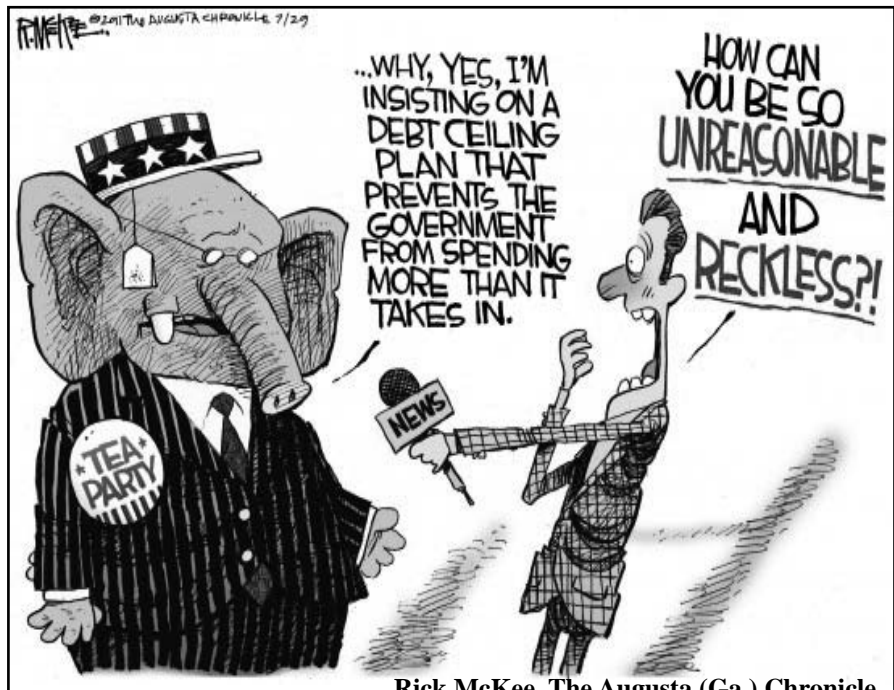

The fate of the drug bill made the session a failure. Lawmakers have 60 legislative days to address the state's problems and the bill should be easy to pass in the special session that Beshear has called, but the need for a special session, costing about $60,000 a day, is what makes the regular session a failure.

Beshear, who has been in danger of being judged the least effective governor in his own lifetime, wasted no time in blaming the latest and previous debacles on Williams. Beshear's dander was clearly up. In his news conference immediately after the session, he used language that was harsher than any attack he made during their race last year.

But Williams is on target when he criticizes Beshear for not being fully engaged with the legislature. If Beshear were more engaged, he would have more leverage among lawmakers, including Republicans who might be able to curb Williams's competitive passions.

Beware of scam

Gallatin County Sheriff Josh Neale says we should be wary of scam artists who are making phone calls to tell residents their credit cards have been frozen.

"These people are fishing for personal information so they can steal identities," the sheriff said. "They tell people to provide them with their information so they can reissue them a credit card. It's very important that people do not tell them anything."

Neale says anyone who receives a suspicious phone call should contact his office.

"This has been so hard on our family," said Gallatin County Library director Shirley Warnick, who is one Stephenson's 33 first cousins. "First Uncle Billy and Aunt Peggy are murdered and now all this stuff comes out about Steve. The Stephensons are honest, hard working and proud people. They just don't act like he has acted."

We are in shock and very saddened."

Neither Indiana nor Kentucky police have said Stephenson is a murder suspect but it's clear they are keeping a close watch on him and hope to keep him in jail while their investigations continue.

He is scheduled to appear in court on April 23. His ex-wife and son attended Monday's hearing but did not comment.

Beware of web sites offering diplomas

Kentucky Adult Education has issued a consumer alert for fraudulent web sites claiming to offer high school and GED diplomas for a fee through the Internet.

"Kentuckians need to know there is only one way to earn a GED credential and that is through a test administered on site at an Official GED Testing Center," said Reecie Stagnolia, vice president for Kentucky Adult Education.

Only a state may issue the GED test credential. The GED test is not available online as claimed on these web sites. The exam, which takes more than seven hours to complete, is administered only at Official GED Testing Centers.

Kentucky Adult Education offers free instruction only through local adult education centers and offers classes in every Kentucky county. For a limited time, Kentuckians can also take advantage of free GED testing.

Nearly 800,000 adults across the country take the GED test each year on their path to better jobs, training and education. In 2010-11, Kentucky Adult Education awarded 10,294 GED credentials.

The GED Testing Service has created the first online repository where educators and test-takers can get assistance in spotting a suspicious claim. The site has a list of fraudulent web sites, information about how to determine legitimate accreditation and an area to report suspected fraud. Visit www.GEDtesting-service.com/fraud to learn more.

For more information on taking free classes and taking the GED for free through June 30, 2012, visit www.gallatin.k12.ky.us/adult_education or call 859-567-6046.

Lady Cats headed for state

Mark Gray
Sports Reporter

The Gallatin County Lady Wildcat softball team has made history for the second year in a row.

Last May, Coach Linda Edmondson's girls won the school's first district title in the school's history.

On Sunday afternoon at Williamstown High School, the Lady Wildcats captured the All A Regional Tournament for the first time.

Gallatin rode the arm of tournament Most Valuable Player Danielle Nicholson and a strong defense to shut out both Williamstown and Owen County.

Williamstown

The Lady Wildcats opened the tournament with a 10-0 six inning victory against the host Demons.

Hannah Dossett went 4 for 4 with three RBIs and three runs scored to lead the offense.

Nicholson, Brooke Dossett and Hayden Seng had three hits apiece. Seng also had a home run and knocked in three runs.

Kelsea Satchwell, Kaitlyn Barnes, Gloria Groves, and Alysse Kearns had one hit apiece. Nicholson and Satchwell had two RBIs apiece.

Owen County

After receiving a forfeit from Eminence in the semi-finals, the Lady Cats took on Owen County, who defeated tournament favorite Walton-Verona 3-0 in the other semi-final contest.

Gallatin got on the scoreboard in the third inning when Hannah Dossett knocked in Brooke Dossett for a 1-0 lead.

Nicholson made the 1-0 lead stand up and the Lady Cats added an insurance run in the sixth inning, when Kelsea Satchwell singled, stole second, and came around to score on Kaitlyn Barnes's single.

Nicholson then finished off the Rebels for the 2-0 shutout victory. She allowed only three hits and struck out four batters.

The Gallatin defense had only one error as Nicholson recorded her seventh shut out of the season.

Hannah Dossett, Brooke Dossett, McKenna Williamson, Seng, and Alysse Kearns.

na Williamson, Seng, and Barnes had one hit each.

Joining MVP Nicholson on the All Tournament Team were Seng, Hannah Dossett and Brooke Dossett.

Other Games

After a 7-1 victory at Shelby on Monday night, the girls will take a 9-3 record into this week's action. They will host Trimble County on Monday and Carroll County on Tuesday.

State Tourney

The Gallatin County softball team will travel to Owensboro for the All

A Classic on April 28 and 29. The games will be played at Jack Fisher Park.

The Lady Cats will play their first game on Saturday at 10:30 a.m., against the 10th region winner. That will be either Nicholas County or Bracken County.

At 2 p.m., they will play 12th region champion Danville and at 5:30 p.m., they take on Jenkins, champions of the 14th region.

The top two teams in each pool will advance to Sunday's games. An eight-team single elimination format will decide the champion.

Here is what some of our friends have been doing lately:

Clay Warnick recently looked under his 20-year-old Toyota Ter- cel to figure out why it had grown so quiet. He was amazed to find that a mysterious mechanic had secretly wired up the muffler that had been banging so loudly. Clay asked a small child who lived nearby if he'd seen anyone working on the car. The boy said, "All I can tell you is that his initials are V.B. and that he has a fine head of sil- ver hair."

Clay is very grateful to this mystery mechanic.

Bill Dietz visited Gal- latin County last Friday to visit his farm and friends here. He's doing well and says hi to ev- eryone he knows and re- minds them that Gallatin County is the best place in the world.

Shirley Chipman at- tended Good Friday ser- vices with Mae Wallace before having dinner with Ethan Moore, and Jerry and Linda Webb. On Saturday afternoon, Shirley, Savannah, De- rina and Autaum col- ored Easter eggs, then attended the Methodist Church Easter egg hunt at the park. On Satur- day evening, Shirley and Mae Wallace attended the Passion Play at the Methodist Church. This past Saturday, Shirley enjoyed the company of Mae Wallace as well as Lanette and Jama Mor- rison. Her Sunday din- ner guests were Derina, Savannah, and Autaum Doolin, along with Lan- ette and Jama Morrison.

Beverley Andrew re- ports that her mother, Rose Ayres, was in the hospital last week for surgery, and would great- ly appreciate a visit from friends. She also tells us that her aunt, Lizzie Beach, is at Gallatin Health Care in room 603 and would really enjoy a visit. Beverly reminds us that many people there would like to be ac- knowledged by friends

Royce Adams to be honored with reception

The community is in- vited to an appreciation reception that will be held in honor of House Rep- resentative Royce Adams on Saturday, April 28, at the Grant County Exten- sion Office. Refreshments will be served from 5 to 9 p.m.

Rep. Adams is retiring from office and has served Owen, Gallatin and Grant Counties for over 20 years.

The extension office is located at the entrance to the Grant County Park, 105 Baton Rouge Road, Williamstown, Ky.

and neighbors with a friendly smile and hello, even if we don't actually know them.

John Bennet and Mary Jane Day presented a program at the Kenton County Extension Office last week about how to create barn quilt squares. These designs are ap- proximately 4'x4', look like actual quilt squares painted on plywood or Dibond, and are then framed in wood. These squares started in Adams County, Ohio, when a daughter paid tribute to her mother, an avid quil- ter, by painting a quilt pattern on their barn. A National Quilt Trail is rapidly spreading across Ohio as well as Kentucky and neighboring states. More than 400 color- ful quilt squares adorn barns, flood walls, and other significant struc- tures. Mary Jane report- ed that Kenton County is just getting started on this project, while Owen County has well over 100. There are approx- imately 20 right here in our county, and an ex- ample can be seen at our own public library. All projects are similar, ex- cept they are shaped by each community's own values, vision, heritage, and cultural strengths. Each grass roots com- munity project captures the spirit of place using art for community cel-bration and economic development. Anyone who would like more in- formation on barn quilt squares may contact the Gallatin County Exten- sion Office.

Matt, Laura, Luke, and Noah Marksberry, along with Stacey Stacy and her son, Bryce, went to the Louisville Zoo last Friday. They all en- joyed the nice weather and seeing the animals. For lunch everyone got pizza and fried pickles. Afterwards, Aunt Stacey kept Luke and Noah for a sleep over. Sunday af- ternoon guests of Sarah Marksberry were Connie and Donny Marksberry, Samantha Maxwell, Kawika Colon, Linda Eckler, Lillian Smith, Rod Eckman and Jake Keyes. Sarah enjoyed all of her guests and the nice weather.

Bob and Alex Wel- don joined Joanna Hay- mond, Sally Haddix, and Bill Leger last Friday afternoon for a delight- ful lunch at Jewell's on Main. Mr. Leger is a graduate of Chase Law School and is now work- ing with Spike Wright at his law office.

Diane Young has had another great week with her family, which always delights her. On Tues- day, she and her hus- band, Ron, went to see the movie This Means War, which they enjoyed very much.

On Wednesday, Di- ane spent the day with her brother at the hos- pital, then visited with her mother and spent the night. She got up early on Thursday and went to Ft. Wayne, Indiana, to the Vera Bradley outlet sale. On Friday, she and Ron picked up their twin grandchildren, Jeffery and Lila, and took them to Chuck E. Cheese's for the day. On Saturday, Di- ane entertained her cous- ins Trish, Sonja, Daliah, son Ron and his friend Pat with dinner and some lively conversation.

Got news? Always glad to hear from you!

Louise Roberts

90th Birthday Celebrated

Mrs. Louise Roberts celebrated her 90th birthday on Sunday at the Glencoe Baptist Church, surrounded by family and friends.

She shared with the group what life was like when she was a child, growing up with no TV, no running water, no electricity and no indoor plumbing. She walked three miles to school and had chores to do when she returned home in the afternoon. She attended Glencoe School through the 10th grade where students began the day by answering roll call with a Bible verse and com- pleting projects about books of the Bible.

She completed the 11th and 12th grades at Gallatin County High School. After graduating in 1940, she married John T. Roberts and they were married over 50 years. They raised two children, Monty and Mary Ann, and now have two grandsons, Jonathan and Matthew.

Mrs. Roberts teaches the women's Sunday School class, is active in WMU work, plays the piano for worship services each week, and on the fourth Monday of each month, she helps lead the hymn sing for residents at Gallatin Health Care. She told everyone to "reserve this day ten years from now because we will do this again when I am 100!"

To the Citizens of Gallatin County,

As you know April 1ST starts the severe weather season for our area. In the effort to keep the county residents safe during weather emergencies, the Gallatin County Fiscal Court has implemented a system called One Call Now. In the event of severe weather this system allows the 911 Dispatch Center to send you a phone call alerting you of severe weather.

To be put on this call list you must either call the 911 Dispatch Center at 567-7021 or stop by the Judge Executives Office. Cell phone numbers can also be put in the system, each household can have up to six phone numbers listed.

In the event of severe weather the Dispatch Center will call you making you aware of the weather alert and how long it will last.

Planting by the Signs

by Phil Case

We certainly found out last week that winter's not quite done with us – a painful reminder after the “no winter” we had and then the incredible spring before spring even officially began!

The cold and frost of last Wednesday and Thursday mornings, April 11-12, reminds us yet again that statistics don't often lie and while we may roll the dice and get lucky, completely dodging late frosts and freezes, there's that chance things will get nipped – just as they did last week.

And “statistically” that won't end until sometime between Derby Day and Mother's Day.

If you've planted veggies from the cool-weather crop list here then there shouldn't have been any lasting damage and if there was there's plenty of time to replant.

Just let this serve as a reminder that we still have, at minimum, more than two weeks before the danger statistically passes, more likely nearly four, which gets us to Mother's Day.

Be patient!

At best the soil temperature is around 60, more likely now in the mid to upper 50s. Summer heat-loving veggies, again, will not do a thing but sit there with their parkas pulled around them when the dirt they are in is that cold. Warmer days will be here soon.

Now, here's what's happening this week with the phases of the moon and signs of the zodiac, followed by the list of cool-weather-loving crops that can be planted in the unprotected garden.

The moon is in the dark phase now and will remain there until the new moon comes into force at 3:19 a.m. this Saturday. Thus through Friday plant only those cool-weather-loving veggies that produce beneath the ground.

Then starting Saturday afternoon and until the next full moon on at 11:35 p.m. on May 5 – might as well wait until May 6 – plant only those that produce above the ground.

The signs find the very fertile sign Pisces (the feet) in force today (Wednesday) and Thursday with the moon in the dark phase. Plant any below-ground producer from the list on either of these days.

All planting should cease Friday and Saturday (don't you hate that on the weekend!) when the sign moves to Aries (the head), one of the two killing signs. Reserve these days for any activity but planting. And on Saturday the moon moves to the light phase,

The very fertile sign Taurus (the neck) comes to rule Sunday and Monday, April 22-23. The moon will be in the light phase then so plant above-ground producers from the list.

And then we find a dilemma: Gemini (the arms) comes into force Tuesday and next Wednesday with the moon in the light phase. Gemini is the bean sign and beans planted when Gemini is in force and the moon is in the light phase – which is what we will find – produce incredibly.

Here's the problem: There is still a statistical danger of frost for another two weeks or so and because of the recent cool snap the soil temperature has cooled a bit and beans LOVE hot soil and weather. If you decide to take a chance and plant, there's the risk you'll lose them to a late frost or the ground may not be warm enough for them to even germinate but there's also a chance you could be the first around to have a mess of green beans!

Depending on the variety, bush beans take 50-60 days to mature. And, if the soil's warm, they'll germinate in about 7-10 days. You do the math; you decide – all I'm doing is giving you the information!

Two great general planting days for above-ground producers (still from the list unless you're a risk taker) are on tap for April 26-27. The moon is still in the light phase and the sign will be in Cancer (the breast) one of the four most fruitful signs.

Cool-weather lovers

Here, according to Home Vegetable Gardening in Kentucky, are those veggies that can be planted now, the ones that enjoy cool soil and air temperatures and can withstand frost, even light freezes: peas, snow peas, spinach, onion sets, radishes, rhubarb crowns, rutabaga, Irish potatoes and turnips, leaf lettuce, Bibb lettuce plants, lettuce head

Getting Children to like vegetables

"Ewww, not broccoli!" or "I'm not eating those carrots!" are common phrases echoed by many children at mealtimes, but it doesn't have to be this way. Parents can do several things to get children to eat and enjoy a variety of fruits and vegetables.

Fruits and vegetables are important sources of fiber and many vitamins children need for their health, growth and development. The U.S. Department of Agriculture's MyPlate is a guideline for how to eat healthy. MyPlate suggests vegetables and fruits comprise half of a typical meal. Children develop food preferences at an early age so the earlier and more often children eat vegetables, the better.

Many children claim they do not like certain vegetables when they've never tasted them. Make sure your children taste a particular vegetable before they decide not to like it. Sometimes children don't like the way a vegetable is prepared, which causes them believe they don't like a vegetable. If your children don't like a cooked vegetable, try offering it raw or mixed with other foods and vice versa. You can set a good example for your children by consuming more vegetables and fruits yourself, especially during family mealtimes when children are watching you.

Parents should make sure children have ready access to fruits and vegetables. Make sure vegetables of some form are offered at every meal. Offering a variety of vegetables at mealtime will allow children to pick the one they like. Pre-washing and keeping small bags of vegetables in the refrigerator allow the child to easily access and eat vegetables as snacks.

Children are more likely to try things that they've helped prepare. Growing a garden, letting your child help you cook and visiting a farmers market or grocery store and allowing them to select the vegetables are good ways to get children to eat vegetables.

Remember that serving sizes for children are smaller than adult serving sizes. A general guideline is one serving equals one tablespoon of a vegetable for each year of the child's age. Also remember that children are individuals and vary in how much they eat and what they like.

If your child still refuses a particular vegetable, keep trying. Children tend to fear new foods, and many times it will take them eight to 10 tries before they are ready to taste the vegetable. It may take them even longer to decide they like it.

Vegetables should be offered in a relaxed environment. Forcing, threatening, punishing or offering a reward for eating vegetables have proven to be unsuccessful strategies to get children to eat and like vegetables.

Ask Doctor Dirt...

By David Hull

Dr. Dirt Looks at 50

In case by some miracle you haven't already heard, yours truly turned 50 last week. I'm sure this news comes as a shock to anyone who knew me in high school or college. I bet most of them figured I would have died of stupidity way before now. But, alas, here I am.

Reaching a milestone such as this causes one to look back, and perhaps ponder things a little more than usual. And frankly, some of the things I've been pondering recently have left me a bit disappointed. For example, we still haven't cured the common cold. In my lifetime, we've put men on the moon with little more than a number two pencil and a slide rule; but we can't stop a virus from wreaking havoc on our bodies for 14 days? What's up with that?

And what about the vehicles we're driving? I thought for sure we'd all be humming around in hovercrafts, or some other means of levitation by now. Boy, was my high school science teacher ever wrong! Heck, even the cars nowadays aren't better than before; I mean, who wouldn't rather have a '68 Z-28 Camaro over anything coming out of Detroit in 2012? Just sayin'.

But one area where we have made true progress is in agricultural production. In 1960 there were nearly 4 million farmers in the U.S.; today there are less than a million. But in spite of this, today's farmers are feeding more and more people. In 1960, each farmer produced enough to feed approximately 25 people; today each farmer produces enough to feed 155 people. This progress is due to changes in plant and animal genetics, changes in the size and functionality of farm machinery, and changes in basic farming practices. And because of changes such as precision agriculture and conservation tillage, today's agriculture is more environmentally friendly than ever before.

About the only thing about agriculture that hasn't changed all that much is the person running the farm, the farmer. He or she still works from sun-up to dark-thirty. When they aren't tending the crops or the livestock, they're busy being a mechanic, a veterinarian, a bookkeeper, and, time permitting, a mother, father, husband or wife. They're never looking for pats on the back for what they do; and it's probably a good thing since they get so few of them.

I always kind of liked what Dwight Eisenhower said about farming, "Farming looks mighty easy when your plow is a pencil, and you're a thousand miles from the corn field". Yep, that pretty much sums it up.

Doctor Dirt is really David Hull, Gallatin County Extension Agent for Agriculture. If you have farm or garden questions for the good doctor, stop by or call the Extension Office at 567-5481. Or, email him at dhull@uky.edu.

Host families needed for 4-H International Exchange Program

This summer, 15 young people from Japan and an adult chaperone will come to Kentucky to learn about American families and culture. A great way for you and your child to take part in this international experience is by becoming a host family for one of these students. Applications are now being accepted.

Not only do 4-H host families get to enjoy helping the Japanese 4-H'er learn about American families and culture, but they also learn about Japanese culture, customs and history. Many times, lifetime bonds are created.

The Japanese young people are from the 4-H Language Laboratory or LABO program and are between the ages of 12 and 15. These young people want to experience the life of an average American family. They will spend July 22 through Aug. 18 in Kentucky. Hosts must pick up their new sibling July 22 in Louisville and return them Aug 18 to the same location.

There is no cost or language requirement to become a host family, but families should have a child that is of similar age and gender as the international 4-H'er. Kentucky 4-H is especially looking for host families for boys, as there are several of them to place. Host parents should provide for the Japanese 4-H'er in the same way as for their own children. International 4-H'ers should have their own area and bed, but can share a room with their host sibling.

Host families are encouraged not to plan extravagant trips or deviate from their normal routines. The Japanese youth bring their own spending money for any extras they may want to purchase.

Since the program focuses on American culture, Japanese 4-H'ers will not be placed in homes of families with the same cultural background.

While in the United States, the international 4-H'ers and their host families can participate in 4-H programs at any level in which they are comfortable. The family, however, does not need to be 4-H members, and 4-H participation is not required.

If you do not have a child but would like to participate in the program, you can become a host for the chaperone.

The chaperone has good English-speaking skills and will stay with a host family for either a two- or four-week period. The chaperone's main objective is to help with communication and facilitate problems any of the Japanese young people may have.

If you are interested in becoming a host family or receiving more information on international opportunities through 4-H, contact Mark Mains, 4-H International Program coordinator, at 859-257-5961, ext. 231 or mark.mains@uky.edu.

Requesting information does not obligate families to host students this year. Biographies of the Japanese young people can be obtained after an application for hosting is submitted and approved.

More information on 4-H International programs can be found on the Kentucky 4-H International Exchange Program website <http://www.kentucky4h.org/international-exchange>.
